Birds of the San Bernardino National Forest--Southern Portion Anita K Booth

"Birds of the San Bernardino Mountains--Southern Portion" is a guide for bird watching in the southern portion of the San Bernardino Mountain's two ranges. This guide focuses on foothill and mountain bird species beginning near the range's base and ascending to its highest elevation of 5000'. Included are birds of the San Jacinto Mountains, Santa Rosa Mountains, Lake Hemet, plus the communities of Idyllwild, Garner Valley and surrounding areas. This guide separates itself from others due to its area specificity. Features 92 species, more than 120 color photos plus pertinent information about each bird's length, weight, wingspan, description, and where to look for it. Includes an area map and checklist for sightings. The author is an accredited Bird Biologist with Cornell University, Lab of Ornithology and the author of five bird guides.
