From our entry into the war at Pearl Harbor in December 1941 until the Japanese surrender at Tokyo Bay in September 1945, every major offensive campaign launched by the United States was initiated by an amphibious assault. Our landings at North Africa in November 1942, at Sicily and Italy in July and September 1943, and at Normandy and Southern France in June and September 1944 ended in the defeat of the German armies in Western Europe by the Allied Expeditionary Force in May 1945. The Pacific offensive, which began in the South Pacific with the landings at the Solomons in August 1942 and in the Central Pacific at the Gilberts in November 1943, carried us 3,000 miles up the New Guinea-Netherlands East Indies axis for the reconquest of the Philippine Islands and 5,000 miles through the atolls and islands of the Japanese Mandates to the inner defenses of the empire in the Volcano and Ryukyu Islands. Before the Japanese surrender in September 1945, we were preparing for the final assault—an amphibious assault—and the destruction of the Japanese Army. The surrender was caused by the losses inflicted on the enemy in our amphibious offensive and by the pressure we were able to bring to bear on Japan from the naval and air bases gained in that offensive. Amphibious warfare was the primary offensive tactic in our conduct of global war.
