What all this adds up to is that when you read in this pamphlet about conscience, you are listening to the voice of a conscience incarnate. When next someone who is skeptical, or perhaps cynical, about nonviolence says that it may “work” in India or when you are dealing with “civilized people like the British; but what about Hitler?” you can recall that you have listened to a man who practiced nonviolence through all the years of Hitler’s regime without compromising. Nor is his pacifism a merely personal or interior attitude. The problems of the economic order, of race relations, of East-West relations, of the transformation of society and culture in the nuclear age, deeply concern him. He is one of the forerunners and earliest leaders of the nonviolent revolution which is gaining followers in many lands outside India. All of them, as well as all who as Christians may be interested in the acts of a modern apostle, should read this pamphlet.
