Life zooms at us from every conceivable direction at the speed of light, with its frightening and bewildering issues and relationships. We could use some help grappling with all of these complexities. It may catch us completely off guard and shock us to learn that God, it turns out, is for us and not against us as we have very naturally supposed! It is not obvious, but behind the scenes, He is busy conditioning our hearts for life's vital relationships, determined to bring us safely through the gauntlet to be at Home with Him. It is a long harrowing journey—but one well worth traveling! "If Our Hearts Condemn Us . . ." was written with these struggles--struggles of the heart in mind and the safe passage Home that results. Our Heavenly Father is fully intent on providing and revealing the way in surprising methods suited to each one of us, for we are His precious sons and daughters.

Each 'chapter' in this book may be read together in succession with the others, or as separate 'stand alone' selections. They are individual vignettes pointing to one overarching theme: Life--life as God created it and intends that it be lived by every single one of us! Paradoxically, He moves to teach us the 'jist' of this life through the very lives that we are living!
