Annie's Ghost, A Romance in Five Days

Left on her own on Black Mountain, Vermont, in January when the North Eastern states are experiencing one of the heaviest snow storms for years, Annie is slowly recovering from a hysterectomy. Her husband, John Jackson, is attending a conference in New York City. Her two grown-up children live a long way away, her daughter in Montana and her son and his family in Florida.

Annie is exhausted both from the operation and the problems of trying to deal with her husband's inattentions and the fact she is unable to work at the job she loves: teaching children in an all age school in rural Vermont.

Once John has set off for New York she is both relieved and worried. At last she falls asleep and sleeps for over twenty hours.

When she awakes she hears a voice from the garage asking her for help. And so begins Annie's dilemma for once she revives the young man she finds in the garage does she succumb to his attentions?

An evening spent discussing some of the most erotic poetry ever written in English – the Songs and Sonnets of John Donne, the great metaphysical poet – draws Annie and Will dangerously close to Annie doing something she may regret for ever.

An absolutely glorious afternoon spent playing in the snow in the magical fairy-like forest brings Annie alive again and makes her determined to make her marriage glow once again.

For Will time is running out. He appears to be desperate to get to know Annie intimately. In spite of her fierce determination to remain faithful to her husband Annie feels irresistibly drawn towards Will until she feels compelled to do something utterly against her natural instincts.

Annie's Ghost is a deeply romantic love story with a shocking twist at the end that may break your heart.

Annie's Ghost is a love story for women featuring an extremely handsome young man and a middle aged woman. It is also a romance in Vermont, a ghost story and a paranormal romance. You may think it a fantasy romance or even something else entirely but you will have to decide for yourself.
